MORE ABOUT CHINESE IMBROGLIO

(From the China Mail, July 224.)

ail is a new difficulty with the Chine which led to an attack on the 25th m and upon the Taku forts at the mouth hiho, resulting in the total defeat of the ee, with the loss of no less than five between four and five hundred hoat one-third of our force employed. The Hon. Mr. Bruce [bearer of has not the power to collect troops for a a new war with China; and if he most untoward events which could have ed in the present state of foreign relations her rulers : but neither its untowardness, and fate which bedell so many of our force the management of Admiral Hope, should mitted to prejudice our judgment as to the he that the Chinese were entirely in the We have every reason to believe that the its we have received on the subject are antially correct, and if so, they throw much on the supposition that the Chinese medisught to a conclusion within two years, which period the American and Russian entiaries would be resident at the Court king, and acquiring an influence which we in vain hope afterwards to overtake. At sais, we put forward the statement of the side, as they have no one to represent in Europe; and shall be glad to hear that be more than met by the representations of meh and British Plenipotentiaries.

in their Excellencies Mr. Bruce and M. de bulon arrived at Shanghae, they both deand Hwashana, on the ground that, as bound to Peking, they could hold no impressive with them until they reached , though letters were addressed to the s secretary of State, informing him of emintment as Ministers to the court of But considering the relations which assisted between these high functionaries in English and French Plenipotentiaries par, we think that courtesy shown towards by their successors in acceding to their refit a meeting would have had a favorable without in the least derogating from the maken that the new Ministers could only to the capital. They remained at Shang-est the capital. They remained at Shang-est and days, though it was declared to be of lighest importance to reach Peking by the had 27th of June to exchange ratifications in the expiry of the year. When Kweiliang and the British Minister that on his arrival at much of the Peino some one would be there et him, he did so with entire sincerity. prespondence with him would carry con am this point if it was made known; and my as well give up all intercourse with edicials on every subject, if the assertions is imperial Commissioners on this point are parded as deceptive. Strong efforts and is were used to induce them to come up ing by steamer with the Foreign Ministers, frigate was offered to convey them, but we hampered by their instructions, and is to return north by land, even if two is were consumed in the journey.

Is were consumed in the journey.

Is consist with the memorial to the Emperor is the approach of the Foreign Ministers and to have left Shanghae on the 11th of and Hang, the Governor-General of Chihlip days after the Allied Ministers. These of the advantage of steam, and could fix smavoidable delay, and mistakes or stopcouriers in a country like China, had considered, we think they ought to ar exchanging ratifications expired. In this sad event, it should be borne in that the treaties were only to be exchanged, excited; both the English and French ments were satisfied with their terms, and disire to re-open any point in them. tant therefore to act moderately, and if peror's counsels had changed, and he had need to reject the treaties, at least the re-

Paiky should all be thrown on him.
Paiko was found to be strongly defended and piles, so as to make it difficult to Tientsin, but Admiral Hope and all Ministers were informed that they were ed at the northern entrance or emand not at this mouth. The Amerient messengers to the forts on the was told by one of the garrison that General Hang had that day reached the th, and that he would there receive the Peking. His course was plain; it was the provided, before declaring that the Gremment had violated the treaty, and him an entrance. tions in the river, and allow a passage to men-ofwar to Tien-tsin. The main object of the visit was granted, and the Chinese Government certainly had the right to indicate the way of conducing their visitors to Peking. As the treaties themselves were more important than that their ratifications should be exchanged, by a particular day, so the fact of the visit to Peking being allowed, was more important than the particular road taken to get there.

We are so much in the habit of judging every act of the Chinese by our own notions and better saur knowledge, that sometimes full credit is hardly given them, when we are ignorant of all their designs and views. In this case, the Imperial government may have had some suspicion that a large force might be brought to its capital under Comm the name of an escort, which it might find difficult to induce to retire, remembering its own H. VOX HOLT Governor-General of India, we trust ruse in 1644, by which the Ming dynasty was overthrown. The Chinese, like all mankind, General Commission Merchants, Honolulu, Oahu, S. L. 105-tf judge the motives and acts of others by their own views, and this fear may have had greater weight than we have imagined.

There was nothing to fear in going to. Peking in a peaceful manner, for every motive that could commend itself to the minds of the Chinese offies delayed to the last moment in cers, combined to ensure a safe and courteous conduct thither. By indiscreet haste in pressing the immediate passage up the river, when really as treaty with Lord Elgin. He arrived at as we fear, time enough had not been granted to the Peiho only on the evening of the provincial authorities to reach its mouth, has June, though the treaty had to be ex- the promising conclusion of negotiations been de-26th; and we have reason to stroyed, which the treaties of Tien-tsin encouraged. Three or four days more, and a visit to the official) was deputed to meet him the northern entrance, called Pek-hang, there to importer and Dealer in Hardware, Dry Goods, Paints, Oils, and general Merchandise, corner of Fort and King streets. 105-t rangements had been made, and the reasons for barring the Peiho, would at least have afforded time and chance to have avoided an appeal to arms. It would certainly have fuller developed the intentions of the Chinese Government, and put them in the wrong more plainly, if they designed a final struggle. Well may the Governor-General say, in one of his dispatches, when speaking of the rejection of his communication on the day of the battle, "I thought that the English minister came here to go up to Peking, and there exchange his treaty, and not to seek a quarrel. My astonishment and disappointment at this fight, cannot be expressed."

One cannot fully calculate all the results of this most unfortunate engagement. It has thrown past negociations into such confusion, that one is completely puzzled to guess what turn they will take; but as the simple object of this article is to try to show what inducements might have weighed with the Allied Ministers, to allow a little more time to the Chinese authorities to b arrange their mode of receiving the Foreign Ministers, that speculation need not be pursued.
